A couple of "gents" soliciting funds for some kind of a house of refuge in Kansas City struck town Thursday and from the way they solicited whatever they could get for the institution or themselves, one would have but little confidence in them. Failing to get funds from one of our prominent merchants, they tried to get a box of polish to "shine 'em up" with. Damage Case on Trial

Commencing Wednesday night the case of William Lawson vs. Henry Smith et al was on trial in circuit court. It proved a long-drawn-out case. The witnesses numbered a hundred or more and the plaintiff rested his case about 4 p. m. Thursday.

The case was one for damages, a boy being hurt in the mill operated by Smith and others. The boy it seems was playing at the elevator when injured. The sum of $5,000 is asked. At the close of the plaintiff's evidence, the defendant demurred to the evidence, but the court overruled the demurrer and the defendant produced his witnesses. The case went to the jury Thursday night and after being out 20 minutes they returned a verdict for the defendant.

Of the three cases against Robert Cox for violating the local option law, Cox pleaded guilty to the first charge and was fined $300. The other two cases were continued. The cases against Bush Wheeler and Nathaniel Johnson were nolle prossed.

Major's Majority

The Lawyer Flirted

Smiles were frequent Tuesday in Judge Seehorn's division of the circuit court in Kansas City when Mrs. Alice O'Neill of St. Catherine, Mo., testified in behalf of her daughter who is suing the Metropolitan for $10,000 damages.

"We all live down in St. Catherine in Lynn County," the witness rambled along, "and we are not used to city lawyers. About three weeks ago when the attorneys for the company came down our way to take depositions and sent out subpoenas for witnesses it scared some of the people of our district so that they hid in corn fields and one got down in a well."

"And when the depositions were taken! My, my! Lawyers down our way haven't got the peculiar, dogmatic manner of the Kansas City lawyers."

Judge Seehorn allowed the dignity of the court to loosen. He laughed outright.

"Yes and the way that lawyer flirted with my daughter when she was on the stand was awful. He just smiled at her every time he asked a question. It just made my blood boil, because I have always been particular the way my children shall be brought up."

Miss O'Neill was visiting in Kansas City November 10, 1910. She boarded a car at Twelfth Street and Troost Avenue, she alleges, and while standing on the rear platform the car came to a sudden stop at Eleventh Street, throwing her to the pavement. Her right ankle was sprained, she said.

One of the chief annoyances resulting from the sprained ankle, according to Miss O'Neill's testimony, was that she was kept from dancing for an entire year.

Matrimonials Slow

The matrimonial market was lower this week. Recorder Wayland's Matrimonial Exchange reported but a few deals since the last issue of the Courier. Common stock was below par and fair, preferred, going at a somewhat better price. The previously healthy conditions with heavy trades has visibly affected the present available supply and it is believed some time will pass before the conditions on 'Change regain their normal balance. Dealing in features, according to Mrs. Grundy's daily report, is somewhat more encouraging with the possibility of alliances with houses that will materially affect the stability of future quotations. When interviewed, Recorder Wayland, confessed to being interested in these matters and gave as his opinion the market would take a healthier tone soon. On this report, commons went up to par, selling slowly at 150 while preferred stuff went as high as 156.

A POOR SEASON

For Hunters-Game is Pretty Scarce

This has been and is going to be a poor season for the hunters. In the first place, the dryness of the Fall put an end to the hopes for duck shooting in this section. It first killed the Fall snipe shooting. Then came the duck season. The mallards hardly stopped long enough to see this county and continued onward to the big waters of the Missouri. Some few were killed up around the lakes at Dalton and Brunswick, but these were obtained only at the expense of much work and a week's stay. Those who had plenty of money, time and perseverance managed to get a few of the birds. These were fortunate. The continued warm season put things in shape that the ducks came through slowly and well strung out so that no time was there a really good "shoot" to be had. The quail season is likewise something to be talked about. The scarcity of the little whistlers is thought to be due to the extreme cold weather of the last winter when rabbits and quails were badly frozen out. The wonderful fecundity of the bunny is accountable for his numbers being superior, relatively, to the quail population. The rabbits are to be found plentifully in certain spots, whilst in others there are none to be had. Those that have been killed of good quality, nice and fat and highly edible. The squirrel season has been comparatively good owing to the plentiful supply of nuts. It begins to appear that the man who is not satisfied to shoot rabbits is going to have a slow season of hunting. It may be a melancholy comfort for some of the hunters however to know that in other latitudes where the cold prevailed the hunting is equally poor, especially in Illinois.

His Bet

"Look here; you're big and strong. Why don't you go to work instead of beating your way?"

"I'd like to, bo, but I made a bet early in life dat I could live to be an old man wit'out ever doin' a stroke. You wouldn't want me to ruin me career at dis late day, would you?"—Judge's Library.

"There could be no better medicine than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. My children were all sick with whooping cough. One of them was in bed and had high fever and was coughing up blood. Our doctor gave them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and the first dose eased them, and three bottles cured them," says Mrs. R. A. Donaldson, of Lexington, Miss. For sale by all dealers.
